

The Fortifications.

WE are very glad to observe that these important works are now fast approaching completion, and the contractor, Mr. Russell, is deserving of praise for the substantial manner in which the various structures are being executed. The artillery, under Major Murphy, have been employed for the past three or four days in preparing the guns to be lowered into the case-made battery, which is ready for their reception. The various passages from the battery to the main magazine are all completed, as also the lift through which the shells are received. The battery for the 9-inch guns is awaiting their reception. The look-out post possesses a very finished appearance. Turfing and masonry are being pushed on with all speed, and a gang of men are hard at work, asphaltting the main magazine. An incline is also being made from the battery to the sea, and in a few months at latest we may expect to see the fortifications ready for occupation, and its inmates prepared for any emergency.

1881, October 13th. Newcastle Morning Herald & Miners Advocate, p.2
Works on fortifications under contractor Mr Russell are nearing completion.

The Fortifications

We are very glad to observe that these important works are now fast approaching completion, and the contractor, Mr. Russell, is deserving of praise for the substantial manner in which the various structures are being executed. The artillery, under Major Murphy, have been employed for the past three or four days in preparing the guns to be lowered into the case-made battery, which is ready for their reception. The various passages from the battery to the main magazine are all completed, as also the lift through which the shells are received. The battery for the 9 inch guns is awaiting their reception. The look-out post possesses a very finished appearance. Turfing and masonry are being pushed on with all speed, and a gang of men are hard at work, asphaltting the main magazine. An incline is also being made from the battery to the sea, and in a few months at latest we may expect to see the fortifications ready for occupation, and its inmates prepared for any emergency.