Course Objectives
Upon completion of this course students will be able to demonstrate:
1. An understanding of the history and specific nature of documentary film.
2. Knowledge of the major theoretical positions and aesthetic debates in the area
3. The ability to relate questions of ethics and interpretation to the functioning of the media in the contemporary world.

Course Content
This course involves an examination of the various styles, aims, and methods of the documentary approach to film making. In doing so it explores:

1. The relationship between documentary film, memory, history and reality. Usage and function of experts, witnesses, archive footage and narrators;
2. The responsibility of the film maker to his/her filmed subjects and, related, the relationship between the public's right to know and the subject's right to privacy;
3. Ways by which new forms and technologies erode traditional boundaries between documentary, narrative, and experimental film (and, vice versa, the importation of documentary techniques into fiction films) undermining documentary's traditional claim to truth.

Plagiarism is not only related to written works, but also to material such as data, images, music, formulae, websites and computer programs.

Aiding another student to plagiarise is also a violation of the Plagiarism Policy and may invoke a penalty.
