On June 25, the Vice-Chancellor announced that the university had accepted a tender of W. Stronach Pty Ltd, of Broadmeadow, for the construction of the Medical Sciences Block on the campus.

Professor George signed a contract valued at approximately $3,350,000 with W. Stronach Pty Ltd - one of eight builders from Newcastle and Sydney who tendered for the project. Work on the site is expected to begin in about two weeks.

The contract provides for the construction and equipping of a six-storey building containing 6,500 square metres of space for teaching and research activities. The site is adjacent to the Auchmuty Library, to which it may be connected ultimately.

The building will consist of an in situ concrete frame, brick walls, aluminium windows and suspended ceilings and will be completely air-conditioned. It will contain a 120-seat lecture theatre, laboratories for pre-clinical undergraduate tuition, facilities for post-graduate research and offices for full-time and visiting staff.

Professor George stated that the success of a local builder in obtaining the contract was a matter of satisfaction to the University. The project would generate work for hundreds of men occupied with the building trade in Newcastle, and was welcomed at a time of strong competition from Sydney builders.

He added that the project would have an impact on employment and the local building industry for as long as two years, which was the expected term of the project. The architects for the Medical Sciences Block are Todd, Reddycliff, Stockley, Johnson, of Sydney.

CLOSE ATTENTION TO STATEMENT OF MINISTER

The Australian Vice-Chancellor's Committee has given its close attention to the May 20 statement by the Minister for Education (Senator Carrick) about "guidelines for triennial reports of education commissions and other measures". The implications for universities of Senator Carrick's statement are of major concern to the AVC, the Committee stated.

As regards the triennial system of funding, deep concern has been expressed to the Minister about the announcement that in future financial support for universities will be by a procedure called a 'rolling model'. It was pointed out that, as a permanent system, the procedure will require planning by the universities from year to year and will mean the abandonment of the triennial funding principle which all universities believe to be essential for their proper and efficient functioning.

"It seems clear that the procedure announced by the Minister will be followed for 1977, and probably until 1979. It has been stressed to him that full triennial funding in accordance with past promises should be restored as soon as possible.

On supplementation grants, the Vice-Chancellors are perturbed by Senator Carrick's statement that the present system for supplementing the universities' grants in the light of cost escalations would continue to be applied automatically. "In the light of the Minister's statement about the levels of grants to universities in the years after 1977 in 'real money terms', the Committee has expressed fears that the two percent increase in total wages projected by the Minister will be destroyed by inflation. The maintenance of the present supplementation system is essential".

As regards student assistance, the Committee has impressed on the Minister and Government officials the urgent need to review the workings of the Tertiary Education Assistance Scheme and of the Commonwealth Postgraduate Award Scheme, in the interests of students affected by inflation, and has expressed disappointment that the number of postgraduate awards has been reduced. Prompted by concern that tuition fees were to be reintroduced on a selective basis for students enrolling for second degrees and for higher degree students, and perhaps for foreign students, the AVC has prepared and handed to the Minister a document outlining the implications of and the difficulties in implementing the decision. Senator Carrick has also been made aware of problems with respect to research in universities in the light of present economic stringencies.

SENATE NOTES

A meeting of Senate held on June 23 - the second convened specially to discuss the White Paper on University Government - agreed to forward to the Committee on University Government the following views for consideration, that:-

- Provision for student representatives on University Government and Senate should be increased to at least 10 per cent of membership. This formula would give students at least two seats on the Faculty Board, Faculty of Architecture; 11 on Arts; four on Education; eight on Engineering; five on Mathematics; one on Medicine, and one on Science.
- Deans should not be responsible for making recommendations to the Vice-Chancellor on such matters as staffing increases within the faculties, submissions to the Universities Commission, the construction of new buildings and alterations to existing buildings within the University as proposed in the Paper, but these responsibilities should be exercised by Heads of Departments. No member of Senate should be required to withdraw during discussion of any matter, but a member should have the right to withdraw if a matter relating to him is being discussed if the member feels that by being present there may be a clash of interests. The expectation that the membership of Senate will increase inordinately has not been substantiated and consequently no limit should be put on the size of the Senate. The Vice-Chancellor should continue to be Chairman of Senate. Instead of referring to five members of Council elected by the full-time academic and teaching staff as a whole, one of whom must be the Deputy Chairman of Senate, the by-laws should provide for four elected members with the Deputy Chairman of Senate a member ex-officio.

AUTONOMY DAY

Autonomy Day will be held on July 23. This year's themes are - Bicycles, Public Transport and Education.

The charities to be assisted are - The Southern African Liberation Centre and, The Lord Mayor's Winter Appeal.

Suggestions on activities have been requested by the S.R.C. A committee, under the chairmanship of the President, will make recommendations to the meeting of S.R.C. on July 5.
A project of the Board of Environmental Studies which has now eventuated is the publishing of the Board's newsletter. The publication, which will appear regularly, is aimed at a general readership comprising members of the university and other people interested in environmental matters. The Environmental Newsletter was established not only to provide these people with a forum for articles and letters which will stimulate their interest but also to give information about lectures, seminars and research. Copies of the Newsletter can be picked up in the Union and at other normal distribution points on the campus. Other tertiary institutions, State and local government authorities and local industries are included on the School's distribution list. It is printed in the University Printery and the Editor is Mr Ray Wettinson (Department of Legal Studies, Tel. 676), who is happy to receive contributions.

DR TREVOR REESE

Older members of staff and former students will be saddened to hear of the death in England on June 10, 1976, of Dr Trevor Reese, who joined the History School of what was then the Newcastle University College in March, 1956.

Educated at King Edward's School, Birmingham, he took his BA with first-class Honours at Sheffield University before proceeding to a PhD at London University. Dr Reese arrived here at a most formative time in the University's growth - when we were merely a College of the New South Wales University of Technology (later the University of New South Wales), a University which did not provide Arts courses. As a result of local pressure, the College was permitted to provide such courses under the auspices of the University of New England. His arrival brought the strength of the History School to four: the former Vice-Chancellor, Professor J.J. Auchmuty, Professor Cranfield, Professor Bach and Dr Reese himself. Dr Reese played an important part in establishing the very early reputation of the College for academic merit - and in gaining public support. He was a first-class lecturer, and very popular with students. But he was also much sought after as a public speaker, addressing a number of societies and clubs on University and educational problems. In every way, in these pioneering days, he was a most loyal and valuable servant of the University College and the community, throwing himself into every activity with tremendous zest and enthusiasm. Dr Reese resigned in December, 1959 to take up a senior lectureship at the University of Sydney. His resignation was a great loss to the College, whose reputation he had done so much to enhance. In 1962, he returned to England with a Leverhulme Fellowship in Commonwealth Studies at the University of Hull. He later became Reader in the Institute of Commonwealth Studies of the University of London, a post which he held until his death at the age of forty-six.

He was a first-class historian, specialising in the fields of American and Commonwealth studies - although in his days at Newcastle he was expected to lecture on many other subjects as well. His published works included a history of Georgia in the 18th century, Australia in the 20th Century, History of the Royal Commonwealth Society, and Australia, New Zealand and the United States, together with a number of articles in learned journals.

After his return to England, Dr Reese maintained his contacts with this University, and was regularly invited to sit upon appointment boards. He is survived by a widow and three children.

G.A. Cranfield, Professor of Modern History
Head of the Department of History.

DISCIPLINE COMMITTEE

The University Discipline Committee met on June 28, 1976, to consider an allegation that by his conduct a student had breached the following rules relating to examinations:

(a) No bag, writing paper, blotting paper, manuscript or book, other than a specified aid, is to be brought into the examination room;

(b) A candidate shall not by any improper means obtain or endeavour to obtain assistance in his work, give or endeavour to give assistance to any other candidate, or commit any breach of good order.

The student admitted to breaching the rules and the Committee, in addition to reprimanding him, annulled his attempt at the examination concerned and imposed a fine of $50.
ELECTIONS

The university has completed elections for members of its governing body, the Council. The elected members will hold office from July 1 this year until June 30, 1978. Dr D.C. Finlay, Lecturer in Psychology, was elected unopposed by the non-professorial members of the academic staff, and Mr M.E. Edmonds, Assistant Planner, elected unopposed by the non-academic staff. It was necessary to conduct ballots to decide the two members elected by the professors and the five members elected by Convocation.

In the ballot to elect members who are Professors the voting resulted:

- Dutton, Kenneth Raymond 28
- Ellyett, Clifton Darfield 17
- White, Saxon William 15
- Buckman, Edmund James 397
- Derkenne, Warren Gerard 510
- Laffey, Kevin Alphonsus 287
- Relf, Brian William 400
- Sara, John Ashley 360
- Stansfield, John 299
- White, Kevin Hamilton 515
- Informal 9

Messrs Belcher, Buckman, Derkenne and Relf and Mr White were therefore declared elected.

MAITLAND HIGH'S ARCHIVES

The archives of Maitland Boys' High School have been transferred from the school in High Street, East Maitland, to the University of Newcastle Archives. Covering the period 1856, when the school opened as a private high school, to 1972, the archives are on permanent loan for preservation and research. The archive consists of approximately one dozen boxes of records and includes the school's admission registers, starting from the 1880's; inspection books; a complete set of the school's magazine, The Magpie, beginning in March, 1915; large quantities of school photos, letters, reports, students' progress reports, Old Boys' union records and school inspectors' observation books. The first volume of the school magazine, The Magpie, contains a letter by an early Headmaster, Mr R.J. Hinder, who states that Dr John Fraser had conducted a private high school in Church Street, West Maitland, for many years. (Maitland Boys' High School was established in 1885 in these buildings, which were leased from Dr Fraser.) He (Mr Hinder) had arrived in Maitland on August 17, 1889 to take charge of the school. "When I took charge of the School there were about fifty boys on the roll; there were no bursaries and few scholarships. The fee was two guineas a quarter, later on raised to three guineas, at which they stood till fees were abolished. "If I were asked to make a comparison of the boys of earlier times with those of more recent times, I should be inclined, after the task of being considered laudator temporis acti, to say that the former were disposed to take a more serious view of life and to work with less urging than the latter. Perhaps the latter, receiving free education, value it, in many cases at least, at cost price."

During 1891 and 1892, the present buildings at East Maitland were in course of erection, and after nearly three years' work in West Maitland, Mr Hinder transferred the School to East Maitland in June 1892. The school sent a large number of former pupils to the Great War (1914-1918). The War site in 1915 was 'glad to note that many of our Old Boys are doing their share in the titanic efforts that are being made to stamp out oppression, incendiarism, murder and sacrilege, which have been raging in Europe'.

Included in the school archive is an ensign of the design on which are embroidered the names of many who served in the war, and a menu of an Old Boys' Reunion Dinner held in Cairo.

Besides war memorabilia, the school archive includes other items of special interest: a handsome medallion presented in 1846 to the school's first proprietor and headmaster, Dr Fraser, when he left his old school in Scotland; and an ornate certificate acknowledging the school's success in Rugby in 1909.
Mr Philip Drew, Lecturer in Architecture, is the author of a book on the work of Frei Otto, the German modern architect, which has been published by Crosby Lockwood Staples, of Great Britain, and sells for $36. The book is a detailed technical look at Otto and his intriguing concept of lightweight architecture.

Mr Drew became interested in Otto's work while he was living in England, where he wrote a book, Third Generation: The Changing Meaning of Architecture. He made visits to the Institute of Lightweight Structures at Stuttgart which is supervised by Otto. The German was established as an architect of outstanding interest by the roof of the West German pavilion at Expo '67 in Montreal. His biggest structures are the roofs of the stadia erected for the Olympics of 1972.

Mr Drew says of Frei Otto: "While Otto is identified with tensile architecture, it is not well known that he contributed substantially to pneumatic theory in the late 'fifties, pioneered prefabricated grid shell systems and mist architecture in motion with the development of convertible roofs.

"In his modest garden pavilions of the mid-'fifties Frei Otto rediscovered the traditional tent architecture of the nomadic pastoralists and in particular that of the black tent".

THE CREDIT UNION

The recent announcement by the Federal Government that it is proposed to substantially increase the amounts paid in respect of Child Endowment will be of considerable interest to credit union members receiving payments of Child Endowment. Some idea of the magnitude of the increases is given below:

MUSICAL TALENT

I understand there are some members of staff who consider that working on the campus would be improved if they could soothe their nerves occasionally by relaxing to the strains of suitable lunchtime music. It has been suggested that the members of staff who possess musical talents may be prepared to perform occasionally for 30-40 minutes in the Great Hall, playing the Conn organ, the grand piano, or their own musical instrument, free of charge.

I would be grateful if any member of staff who would be interested in taking part in such a venture, before an audience that would be free to come and go during the performances, would contact me so that a meeting of such persons would be held to discuss the viability of this suggestion.

M.E. EDMONDS.
ONE PERFORMANCE OF CYMBELINE

Shakespeare's comedy-romance, Cymbeline, will be presented in the Arts/Drama Theatre on July 17 at 8 p.m. The production will be by the University of Sydney's Drama Studies Unit.

The Director (Assoc. Professor A. Colman) has adapted a number of Elizabethan plays for ABC radio and directed many university productions, including Much Ado About Nothing (1974).

The setting was designed by Maisy Stapleton. Costumes were designed by Betsy Taylor. Music for Cymbeline was specially composed by Eric Gross, of the University of Sydney, who used the University of Sydney's orchestra to record it.

The score consists of an orchestral suite of 12 numbers, written for chamber orchestra and solo guitar and shofar (an ancient Jewish ram's horn).

Cymbeline is the least often performed of Shakespeare's three late romances. (The other two are The Winter's Tale and The Tempest.)

Cymbeline was a legendary king of Britain in late Roman times. The play deals with his estrangement from, and ultimate reconciliation with, his daughter Imogen, a girl of intelligence, sensitivity, resourcefulness.

The leading roles are played by Penny Gay (Imogen) and David Lawton (Cymbeline). Bookings can be made with the Secretary, Department of Creative Arts, Ext. 705. The cost is students $2 and non-students $3.

Robert Page and Bruce Knappett, Co-editors of Theatre-Australia.

NATIONAL THEATRE MAGAZINE

University staff members, Bruce Knappett and Robert Page, are responsible for a challenging new publishing venture.

They are co-editors of a new theatre magazine, Theatre-Australia, which will appear in newsagencies in August. To be issued monthly, the magazine will be printed in Newcastle and ultimately distributed throughout Australia by Gordon and Gotch.

At first the bulk of the sales will be made by way of subscriptions. The co-editors have launched a drive for foundation subscriptions in order to ensure the magazine's initial success. (see page 7).

Knappett and Page (being assisted with the layout by Robert's wife, Lucy) are confident that their magazine will answer the urgent and ever-growing need for informed comment, criticism and articles on theatre in Australia.

They have given the magazine a broad base hoping it will be of interest to a wide range of people - thea­etgoers, filmgoers, television enth­usiasts, teachers and education­alists and those connected with the theatre profession. The magazine will provide, among other things, a weekly listing of current productions in professional theatres in Australia, criticism of the previous month's productions and articles on current concerns in the theatre.

A number of drama critics and writers have agreed to make contributions to the magazine. They include Katherine Brisbane, Rex Cramphorn, John Romerill, Richard Wherrett and Dorothy Hewett.

The artistic director of the Hunter Valley Theatre Company (Mr Terence Clarke) has given the new theatre magazine his support and applauded the editors' courage.

Mr Knappett has been theatre critic with The Bulletin, The Australian, ABC TV in Queensland, Nation Review and The Newcastle Morning Herald. He has had acting, directing and editing experience and worked for some years as a barrister and solicitor.

Mr Page was Editor, in England, of Student Drama News, Arts Alive and the Journal of the British Theatre Institute. He was a theatre critic for the Sunday Times, Times Educational Supplement and Plays and Players. He was also Director of Thrust Theatre Group.

The Club was well represented in an inter-club 4 x 3000 mtrs relay held on May 15. The team was Glyn Cox (1975 cross-country handicap winner), Alan Ross and John Hawkins (former track Blue). It is hoped that a full team will be fielded in the Inter-Varsity Cross-Country Contest to be held in Sydney at the end of August.

Anybody interested in joining the Club should contact one of the above Committee members or Stan Barwick in the Amenities Office (Ext. 469).

The Club training night is Wednesday, from 5 p.m., on No. 2 Oval.
